MORDAY MORNING, MARCH 21. Tuz annual contest between the two

Pa., comes off on the evening of the 231.

ABOVE PAR AGAIN.—British consols on Friday again rose above par, selling for a sixteenth over 100 cash and 100 S-16 for the account. The extreme case of the British money market and the difficulty of securing profitable investments is thus again illustrated. The withdrawals of money apparently for shipment to this country reached £250,000. British invest-ors have seemingly as much difficulty as those upon this side of the ocean in placing their surplus funds profitable,

ONE of the indications that the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company mean business in the matter of the extension of the Hempfield Railroad is the purchase of face of representatives of other States, all considerable coke territory by Senator H. G. Davis, of this State, and other gentlemen who are supposed to be in the con- and make them look upon themselves as fidence of the company. The extension of the Hempfield to Connellaville will give ment, entitled to dictate its policy, to say a great impeius to the coke trade, inasmuch as the Baltimore and Ohio will then be in a position to do an immense trade in coke

Tas financial situation is in a state of expectancy, operators in all classes of securitities seeming to await developments; first, of the Treasury movements; second, a decision of the question of an extra ses sion of Congress; and third, the turn of afloat on the way to New York, and a further withdrawal of $1,250,000 was made Friday from the Bank of England.

The counties in which the dog law re cently passed by the Legislature is now in force, by which a tax of fifty cents and one dollar is imposed respectively upon male and female dogs, are as follows: Barbour, Berkeley, Brooke, Grant, Gree brier, Hancock, Harrison, Jackson, Jeffer-son, Lewis, Marion, Marshall, Morgan, Ohio, Pleasants, Ritchie, Roane, Randolph, Summers, Taylor, Tucker, Tyler, Upshur,

In the other counties the law is left on tional, to be submitted to the people on the petition of one hundred voters.

Spring Trade-Hopeful Condition of the

Advices from New York tell of the presence in that city of an unusual numper of merchants from all parts of the country, especially from the South and Trade is said to be very active, particularly in dry goods and groceries. The belief is general that this is going to be a great year for business. The country tion-good crops for three years and good prices having enabled debtors to pay up, get out of debt, and get something ahead. Immigration to the West has also materially increased the number of consumers at all points, and given an impetus to opening of new railroads and the rapid development of the public lands have furnished a demand for supplies, and the for cash or close credit that the people means for prompt payment, and hence traders have not been embarrassed, but have been able to settle satisfactorily with Although there is no boom in prices there is a firm market for all staple goods, habitants, and immigration is setting in on almost an unprecedented scale from publicanism in Virginia respectable in the Europe. The government is going to eyes of hitherto Bourbons, and break spend about eleven millions of dollars in down the color line, a consummation dethe improvement of rivers and harbors, a vontly to be wished for. It will open wide great deal of it in the South and West, and this together with the marketing of crops and the continued exports to Europe as- a multitude who will carry with them the sure the public mind that good times brain, muscle and capital that are so much have come to stay.

Politics too contribute to this assurance. the Old Dominion. The excitements of election days are over, Congress seems to be evenly balanced, Garfield is known to be a safe man, bulldozing in the South is passing away, capital is reaching out in all directions, the spirit of progress is abroad in the land. Mexico is soon to become a great Ameri-Mr. Wm. Sharp, No. 228 Belmont street, Beltitre, can market, and the people are in a hopeful and buoyant frame of mind. This is the state of the country, and this it is that the state of the country, and this it is that is giving such a great stimulus to trade in all directions so early in the year.

Mabone and the Virginians The Richmond Dispatch, although a very able and interesting paper, is a Bourbon journal, and has never at any time shown a disposition to accept the logical result of the war. The logical results of the war mean the abandonment of Southern and Virginian ideas as respects their sectional and exclusive character, and the embrac ing of national ideas such as grew out of and prevailed in the war. The Dispatch should have understood long ago that the Virginia of the future could not by any possibility be the Virginia of the past, but must become like the states that in the earlier days of the Republic became free States, and that learned to look upon slaves as human beings, as much entitled to "life, liberty and the pursuit of hap-piness" as any other class of our popula-

The Disputch is one of the journals that has refused to recognize that there could be no enduring reaction as respects the results of the war, that old ideas must entirely disappear, and that Virginia could not be a large, distinctive and semi-independent province such as she had been before the war. It still continued to cater to and foster that pride of stateship, especially Southern stateship, that had proved the bane of Virginia, and that affected to regard the ruling element of the Federal Government at the close of at 5:00 a. m., and city at 12:30 p. m., to accommodate the war as a species of "shoddy,"-as novi homines," accidents of the situation, &c., who were in effect illegitimists, and who should be dislodged and made to give place to their betters, the divine ight element of the old regime.

It has taken a good many years to whip this prejudice and conceit out of the ele-ment represented by the Dispatch, and it is not by any means eradicated yet. They literary societies of Washington College, still bave a lofty contempt for "Yankee Pa., comes off on the evening of the 25th.

in population and importance after the close of the Revolutionary War, the fact that four of the early Presidents were from that State, the fact that the National Capital was under the shadow of her predominating influence, the fact that her politicians came to Congress with slaves as body servants, the fact that the States rights heresy, which meant Virginia pre-pondorance, was constantly flung in the combined to engender and exaggerate in her people an immense self importance, ment, entitled to dictate its policy, to say when the decisions of the Supreme Court should be accepted or rejected, and to be the judge of an infraction by the Federal Government and of the "mode and meastre of redress."

The arrogance of Virginia, notwithstanding it was a land gone to seed, had come to be intolerable before the war. In Democratic National Conventions her representatives moved with an awful solemnity of assured importance, the the April corner in the money market.

As an offset to the demand for money in that the voice of Virginia should be heard consequence of the April settlements, it and heeded on this or that question, or may be said that about $4.0.0,000 gold is dire might be the consequences. The country got sick of this assumption. It grew to be an offense in the eyes of the North in Congress, and contributed materially to that repugnance to State rights supremacy that eventuated in the growth and assertion of an intensely

National feeling.

The people of this country have had enough of Virginianism, and henceforth there will be none so poor as to do it reverence. Virginia has got to take the subordinate place in the category of States assigned her by the census, and she can either go on retrograding in the future as she has in the past, or she can by falling in with the results of the war, accepting them in all their logical bearings, putting aside her conceit and vanity, prepare the way for a new departure that will regenerate her worn out territory by the acqui sition of population and capital. We look to the Mahone departure as a most important event in the history of Virginia. It is vastly more important to Virginia than to the country at large. That State needs to be delivered from the body of death to which it has been tied. We take no account of his readjuster hobby was never in a more prosperous condi- That is a matter of local politics. It is his Nasional attitude that gives his position importance. He has had the sagacity to see that modern Democracy promises nothing for it. Too long she has listened to the voice of the charmer.
